

After some more eliciting of answers from students the teacher because to noticed a common problem. That is, the students had some trouble pronouncing the -ed suffix. The teacher then wrote the three different ways -ed could be pronounced and when each one of the three happens.

The pronunciation was drilled and the teacher did some CCQs. He wrote 10 words on the board, each ending with -ed and each required a different pronunciation. He then randomly selected students to give him the correct pronunciation and he made sure to ask everyone at least once.
